You can buy just about any type of kitchen hardware, from handles shaped like lightning bolts to hand-casted gold pulls. But what about the other knobs we touch all the time; you know, the ones on the stove? Our only options are usually stainless steel and stainless steel—until now. Appliance brand Big Chill just launched seven fresh knob colors for its Retro Collection gas stoves, and the pieces only cost $25 each.

Designer Sarah Catherine made the company's ordinary white appliance look luxe simply by adding Jadeite Green knobs. Another solid option is to go for a tone-on-tone look. We love the subtlety of the Bottle Green stove with Traffic Green knobs. (Psst: You can also pick from the brand's 200-plus custom colors.)

This upgrade definitely turns the heat up, but if you don't happen to own a Big Chill stove, never fear. There are so many other ways to update your appliances on the cheap. Here are a few more hacks we love.
