Personal Connections

Today's appliances are all about smart features and personalized expression in the indoor and outdoor kitchen.

While shifts in kitchen design tend to follow a slow and steady progression, the past 18 months have put the design track into hyper drive. The pandemic has led to a rush of homeowners looking for new and fun ways to update and personalize their spaces with color and function, and the shopping experience has been an eye-opener for many who had no idea what was available to them.

For the home chef, there are ranges that can deliver restaurant-quality results using cooking techniques such as sous vide and combination steam/convection. And, to the delight of many, these WiFi-connected appliances can be upgraded with cooking software as it becomes available. Range hoods now connect to cooking appliances, turning on and adjusting automatically to what is being prepared.

Upgrades in refrigeration include filtering systems to keep food fresher for longer periods, and UV light to kill bacteria and germs. Ice makers produce craft ice and slow-melt versions ideal for entertaining, and wine preservation brings the ideal wine experience to even the novice taster.

On this and the following seven pages, Kitchen & Bath Design News delivers an update to its annual guide to kitchen appliance manufacturers and suppliers, providing company details and major product information about the latest offerings to both the indoor and outdoor kitchen space.
